DEFINITION OF PSYCHOLOGY

DEFINITION OF PSYCHOLOGY:

The study of thought process and its manifestation of evolutive mind, under the domain of sensation and beyond sensation, contextual to finite extent and infinite extent (∞) that is both the endless extents of tininess and vastness of entirety (Íša), in conformity with ubiquity of energy.

➤ UNDER THE DOMAIN WITHIN SENSATION:

Intuitive impact of psychology responds with discreetly constant logic of existence, by sight, smell, hearing, taste and touch, together with integrally non-continuant mathematical denominations of dimension.

➤ UNDER THE DOMAIN BEYOND SENSATION:

Intuitive impact of psychology responds with discreetly non-discreet logic of existence, by imagination of either emptiness or by non-confirmatory dimensions of pretentious presences; contrary to intrinsic value for all.

➤ UNDER THE DOMAIN WITHIN AND BEYOND SENSATION:

Intellectual impact of psychology responds with discreetly constant logic of existence, by intellection of confirmatory mathematical denomination of integrally continuant neutral of Zero (0), as wholeness in conformity with ubiquity of energy. Reference: Law of Existence vide Vedicology.

NOTE:

Intuitive impact of psychology leads to numerous doctrines while intellectual impact of psychology leads to eclecticism of the unitarity of Time and Energy.
